

LARS BOLIN

In the summer of 1944 in Perugia, Italy, a family finds themselves in a dire situation that will shape them for years to come. It takes them on a journey to New York at the end of World War II, via Marseille France.

One of the family members kept a secret for over seventy years until he finally tells the whole story in 2015 to Harry Anderson, an adventurer, travel writer, and photojournalist.

Harry, by chance, got his hands on a family photo from 1943 with the word "arrivato" and the date July 17, 1945 inscribed on the back.

What unravels is a story of passion, honor, pride, and two people finding love, adventure and danger, when returning to Perugia. Here they locate the family member who kept this secret so painful and with so much shame, regret and suspicion of betrayal, that it made him wish he would have ended it a long time ago.

Harry finds out that a lot more is buried in the past and he unknowingly put himself and his loved one in danger he could not have predicted.
